The Liti Capital Team

Liti Capital was formed in June, 2020.

The idea was born from Jonas Rey, who also heads Athena Intelligence, the most successful intelligence-gathering firm in Switzerland and one of the world's most sought-after agencies. His two co-founders, Andy Christen and Jaime Delgado, played a crucial role in shaping and implementing the project vision. They bring proven knowledge in blockchain engineering and innovation in fintech operational and technical experience.

NYC-based David Kay, one of the most successful and in-demand litigation finance strategists in the history of the 25-year-old litigation finance industry, recently joined the team as Chief Investment Officer. When David was Funding Partner of a US billion-dollar private equity fund working in the litigation finance space, he was routinely tasked with monetizing awards valued in the hundreds of millions of US dollars. This included successfully enforcing what was at the time the largest international arbitration award in history - bringing in more than one billion US dollars of cash and securities.

Avenues of Value Creation - Only one of three avenues of value has to be successful in order for a token investment to be successful

1. Liquidity of The Underlying Token.

The LITI token will be heavily marketed, both with an initial launch budget and ongoing significant commitment to marketing.

2. The Performance of Liti Capital.

Liti Capital's unique ability to drive value through institutional capital raises and high-quality cases. Liti's largest case will lead to an increase in market cap and/or dividends which will create value for the investment.

3. The Ultimate Outcome of Liti Capital's Largest Case.

In and of itself, Liti's initial case could create sufficient value to investors/token holders to receive dividends.
